Certificate from the Rev. J. Campbiel, Lecturer on Mineralogy, and Author of "Simple Tests for Minerals."

"This is to certify that on the 21th September last I visited Pre's Creek Silver Mine, and made a special examination of the block known as 'The Carac.' The formation is truly remarkable. An immence porphyritic bluff rises from the ravine below to a beight of upwards of low foet, and this in places penetrated by curious little caves, which give this particular block its appellative. A little work has been done on the very face of the buff, and two excellent reefs of argentiferous gainen nearly two freet wide had been opened out. These reefs at first shower as every prospect of continuing, and, moreover, soom as late a very promising gelena. They run in a N. and S. Graet Long of the continuing and, moreover, soom as late a very promising gelena. They run in a N. and S. Graet Long of the continuing and, moreover, soom as late a very promising gelena a rough and, moreover, soom as late as the promising gelena, the symmetry of the continuing and moreover, and the owner of the continuing and moreover and it shows dupwhich of 2000a, to the ton.

"I have no hesistation that the Caves block—and I must also include the Borough—will prove to be, if not the best, at least second to none on Pye's Creek Silver Mine.

The dead that State has gone Republican by a large and be shally unlocked for plurality. It was known that the resident was very anxious that his party should win, and the candidate for Governor was one of his most hatimate and trusted supporters. But the dissatisfaction in the Democracy at the failure of the Administration to give them the offices which, as they believed, they had failly carned the right to hold by their victory last year, was too great to allow of their making any real effort to win. Why should they waste time and money were a contest which would bring them no more, if they gained, than if they lost it? It is thus made painfully plain that the motion of the civil service reformers that public spirit is of itself a sufficient incentive to the citizen to ensure his active efforts in behalf of his political principles, is not universally true. The Democrated disaffection in New York has taken another form. The nominating convention was practically under the central of Tammany Hall, and a candidate was selected who represents the anti-Cleveland wing of the party.

The nominating convention was practically under the sourced of Tammany Hall, and a candidate was selected who represents the anti-Cleveland wing of the party. Thereupon, the badependents, or as they are called, "Mugwumps," whose votes last year turned the tide in throur of the Democracy, went back to the Republicans. The President, if his party wins, will be the master of a "divided household," and if it loses, will be openly blamed for it, and assailed as a traitor to his own supporters. But he has at least the consolation of knowing that the people as I large, cutside of the political organisations, respect him for the firmness with which he has persisted in giving the theory of a fixed Civil Service a fair trial. He has withstood an almost inconceivable amount of pressure. Every form of coaxing and bullying to make him give way has been tried in vain. It is no secret that he has for months stood almost alone. The men whom he placed in the Cabinet, while they pledged themselves to be true to the programme of a non-partisan civil service, have in practice strained every perve to put their friends into offices; and the rectification of some of the more flagrapt cases of this sort has given him much trouble and anxiety. Perhaps he may still stand firm, even if the fall elections generally go against him but if he does, he will soon find himself in a more isolated position than did even President Johnson. The optimists believe that the removal of Hell Gate will make the Sound the favourite line of approach for all vessels from the north and east. Land in the upper part of the island, and especially water fronts, is much in higher than before, and the opportunities for storing and shipping freight there are much better than from the lower end of the city. But the lower end of the city has for more than two centuries been the favourite spot, and there are few tasks harder than to change an established channel of trade. Now Orleans, for example, is a much mere advantageous port of shipment for freight from the far west than New York; but New York keeps the trade, and gets constantly a larger share of it, in spite of ruinously high port dues and pilotage foes.

NON-RPISCOPAL ORDERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir.—From the time of the Reformation to 1662, the practice of occasionally admitting non-spiacopally ordained ministers of the other reformed churches to her ministry provailed in the Church of England. Since 1662, also, the validity of the orders of such ministers has been admitted by the Church of England. Not only has the non-spiacopal Church of Scotland been formally recognised as part of the Catholic Church, but ministers of the Redormed Probyterian Churches have worked under the supervision of English bishops, and of bishops sent from England to Scotland. Of all this I have given proof which "A Layman" has not attempted to mest. I have now to add that I do not "agree" that "the Church's law" has been "set aside" by this practice, because this law as interpreted by contemporary practice was never, in my judgment, intended to exclude such ministers. At all events, it is an historical fact that the rule which requires episcopal ordination in all her ministers has not been understood as applying to the ministers has not been understood as applying to the ministers of the Probyterian Churches of the Reformation by the rulers of the Church of England—not by "traitors within fac Church," as "A Layman" says, but by such upholders of "Episcopal government and Catholic dectries" as Bishop Cosin and all the bishops of last contury. The Church of England does not in the Preface to the Ordination Service pronounce an opinion on non-episcopal orders; but if does not follow that he has not done so elsewhere. My refutation of Art. xrift, has not been mot. I do consider that the clause quoted by me from the Act of Uniformity "really permitted" "the formitted meaning of the clause.

Mow the banks rise rocky and abrupt, crowned sometimes with an old, castle or legendary ruin; now the near hills are rounded and soft in outline, and richly wooded to their summits; while in every graceful curve and bay of the river nostles a town or village embowered in greenery. Terraced vineyards on all sides, sometimes on smooth and gentle slopes, but often on such steep inclines as to make you wonder how the vines were planted. It is not uncommon to hear persons who have sailed up the Ihine express themselves disappointed with it. I ramember a friend who was familiar with the finest of English and Scottish sceaery once telling me that the Rhine only ranked, in his opinion, with about second-rate Scottish scenery. In this I can hardly agree. There is nothing, to be sure, in the whole course of the river so majestic or impressive, for instance, as the approach to Giencoe from the water; nor is there anything more lovely and all, for extent of landscape, there is mo single river in England or Scottand which surpasses or equals the Rhine. I am not sufficiently familiar with the upper reaches of our Hawkesbury River to be able to institute a comparison between it and the Rhine, but there are bits of our harbour which recall the beautiful German stream—parts of the Lane Core River, for instance, and Middle Harbour above the Spit, where you get the same graceful water curves, the same charm of unexpected vistas, and the sams feeling of every now and then being landlocked as in a lake. There is one at thing which the tourist from England misses in the Rhine landscape, that is the delightful play of light and shadow which is almost never absent from an English summer day. On the morning we sailed up the Rhine, the entire absence of shadow from the landscape was certainly a want. The sun beat down on hill and rock and water with a strong hot light; no passing cloud flocked the dazsling blue, and there was little that was soft or cool to relieve and rest the eye. But it is only in the British isles that one can uncomfortably so, and many nationablies were represented among the passengers. Americans and Britons, I think, predominated. The former were certainly in I think, predominated. The former were certainly in strong force, as they are all over the Continent during the summer and autumn months, and they make the most expert of tourists. Very little, indeed, escapes an American traveller; his energy and watchfulness are untiring; he possesses an extraordinary capacity for sight-seeing, and an apparently limitless zest for the novel and the marvellous. Steady middle-class English folks, content with their annual autumn holiday, sometimes wonder why Americans are such great wanderors, and not unfrequently speak slightingly of this trait in their character. It is attributed to some want in devers, and not unirequently speak significancy of this truit'in their character. It is attributed to some want in the Transatlantic nature, to a restless inquisitiveness and constant craving for change, to a lack of mental repose and balance. But the real cause is, in a great measure, the simple fact that Americans, living in a country of so much vaster extent than Great Britain, and where the distances to be traversed are so much greater, have come to make light of spaces which English people still regard with respect. An average Briton has still an old-fashioned prejudice in favour of time and space; an American has none. What seems to an Englishman a journey is, with an American, merely an excursion. Geographical conditions have operated as much as any other cause to make the Americans a nation of tourists. By-and-bye the same thing is going to happen in Australia; the signs are already in the air.

It goes quite without telling that to watch the would be difficult and tedious to describe the mental effoot that its enormous size and beautiful symmetry impart. A long and strangely-carrved colonands covers a sloping path and leads to a platform of masonry that occupies many acres of surface. The angles of this masonry are supported by winged griffins, while the faces are adorade by allogorical figures. Around are nichas or shrine containing alabaster figures of Gautama; domes, overed by glass tiles, relieve the effect of solidity. Out of this platform the solid mass of the Pagoda rises, ever-diminishing as it ascends with graceful curves, in the shape of a huge pomegranate, to form the tapering spire of the Pagoda to a height of 385 feet. The whole mass is outirely overed with gold plates or gliding. The spire is surmounted by a peculiarly beautiful Hee, or unbrella. And this, though apparently small, measures 50 feet in height and 38 feet in diameter. It is composed of a diminishing serios of fretwork bronne rings glided, intricately braced together, and set with precious stones. Each of the many rings is hung with little bolls, while the crevices are filled with gold and silver Gautamas. Above this umbrella is really a large vane, but it can escarce be distinguished. This vane is decorated with emeralds and rubies, to the value of over £80,000, the gift of the late King of Upper Burmah. And above the vane is an inverted glass bottle, as a protection from lightning, the Hurmeso being perfectly aware of the non-conducting virtue of glass. Along the retaining walls are numerous buildings, some containing alabaster Gautamas of all sizes, each wearing that meaningless sterootyped supect of tranquillity that is associated with a Buddha. Others contain bells suspended from the jaws of brazen tigers. The outside of the bells is a mass of highly relieved figures of animals. Pigrima, as they pass, strike these balls by means of deer horns, and evoke continual and sonorous peals of sound. The golden Pagoda was erected in the 6th century s.c., and it has been kept

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The writer of the paragraph in your issue of this morning having reference to my speech on Wednesday evening was accurate in stating that I was vice-president of the Executive Council in May, 1882. He was not, however, perhaps aware that I left the colony in January of that year, and did not return till after I was out of office. However, had I been in the colony, I have no doubt I would have agreed with my colleagues in adopting the course recommended by the then Minister for Public Works, relying, as he must have done, upon the officers in charge of the department taking all proper steps, and entering into all necessary agreements, so as to protect the country from loss. The neglect to do this, as in the case under discussion, involved a loss of upwards of £8000. This sum of £8000 and upwards has been absolutely thrown away.

I do not desire or intend to reflect upon the gentlement who are at the head of the department. I attack a system of railway managument for which they are not responsible—a system under which work and responsibility is wrongly distributed; a system which, causing friction amongst those who ought to work independently, has occasioned, and will continue to occasion, serious loss to the colony.

I intend to move for all papers in the case of Young v. the Commissioner for Railways. The public will then be able to judge how it was that so serious a loss of public money has been occasioned.

I am, &c., FREDK. M. DARLEY.

ROAD FROM PORT HACKING TO SYLVANIA.

Yesterday a deputation, consisting of Messrs. Bull, Judd, and McCulloch, Ms.L.A., S. W. Ring, Simpson, F. J. E. Holt, and J. H. Carnthers, waited on the Minister for Works to ask for a sum of money to put the road from Port Hacking to Sylvania (Tom Ugly's Point) in order. Mr. Bull introduced the deputation, and Messrs. Carruthers, Judd, and McCulloch spoke in favour of the object, pointing out that the road passed the National Park on its way to the punt at George's River, and was shout four and a-half miles long, portions of it being almost impassable. There was a good deal of traffic, and on the Prince of Wales' Hirthday about 200 people went along it. It was estimated that from £300 to £1000 would be required to put the road in order.

Mr. Lyns, in reply, said that he had a report on this road, but the principal difficulty seemed to be that for a considerable distance it was not a proclaimed road, and unless it was clear that this was a public road, it would be almost impossible to spend money upon it. They asked for £400, £500, or £500, but the officers of the Department reconnended that the amount should not exceed £200, if any, and that the money should be expended only on the surveyed portion of the road. He would have further inquiry rusde, and if there were no legal difficulty and it were possible, he should have the sum of £200 spent upon it; but it would depend almost intogether upon the question as to which part of the road was to be dealt with.

JETTY AT CAREENING COVE.

The same deputation brought under the notice of Mr Abbott the circumstance of a jetty being erected at the foot of High-street, near Carcening Cove, by the North Shore Steam Ferry Company, and they complained that the jetty was being erected without permission having been first obtained.

SUPREME COURT .- PRIDAY, NOVEMBER 20.

NOBLE V. FAGAN.
Mr. O'Connor, instructed by Mr. G. J. Sly, for the plainiff, moved formally for a rule nist to set aside the verdic this matter, which was a District Court appeal.
The Court were in doubt whether, as they were sitting

Mr. O'Connor contended that as the Court was sitting h wase, no matter for what purpose, he was bound to come to the Court under the District Court Appeals Act; he could and move the matter before a Judge in Chambers.

The Court said they would express no opinion as to their power to hear the matter, but allowed the motion to be made formally.

The rule was therefore, by a majority, made absolute for a new trial.

WILSON V. MINISTER FOR WORKS.

This was a motion for a new trial of an action for compensation for land resumed by the Government. The plaintiffs were the executors of the late Dr. Jenkins, of Nepean Towers. The land was taken under 43 Vic., No. 32 (the Water Act), and 44 Vic., No. 16 (the Resumption Act), for the purposes of the Nepean waterworks. A strip of land 100 feet wide and about three miles long had been resumed; a tunnel had been nasde underneath, but the surface had only been interfered with by the sinking of two shafts down into the tunnel. The Government valuation was 5563 12s. 7d. The plaintiff Justice on December 15, 1884, found a verdict for the defendant, a rule nier was granted, and the questions to be argued wave whether the plaintiffs were entitled to conspensation for severance, and whether they were entitled to have the strip of land fenced.

Mr. Darley, C.C., and Mr. Rogers, instructed by Mesars. Norton and Co., for the plaintiff, appeared to move that the rule be made absolute.

Mr. M. H. Stephen, Q.C., Mr. C. B. Stephen, and Mr. Ellis, instructed by the Crown Solition for the Administration.

Ellis, instructed by the Crown Scheiter, for the detendant, appeared to show cause.

SAD DEATH OF A YOUNG MAN AT POINT PIPER.

At the Soudan Hotel, George-street North, yesterday, the Acting Coroner (Mr. W. T. Pinhey, J.P.) held an inquiry touching the death of a man (name unknown) whose body was discovered in the water off Point Piper on the 19th instant. When found the deceased had a bullet wound in his right temple. After the body had boen riewed, the following evidence was taken:

— Samuel Cliettle, clork, residing at Double Bay, deposed: On Thursday morning at about 7 o'clock whilst returning in a beat from Point Piper I moticed what I took to be a mass of seawed floating on the surface of the woter; on approaching it I discovered that it was the body of v man, and that which I had taken to be a bunch of weed was really the man's hair; this was about 20 yards from the wharf; I pulled back to the place where I hired the boat and told the boatman (Richardson) of what I had seen; the body was taken to the dead-house.

Dr. C. F. Eichler deposed: On Thursday morning at 10 had taken to be a bunch of weed was really the man's hair; this was about 20 yavds from the wharf; I pulled back to the place where I hired the boat and told the boatman (Richardson) of what I had seen; the body was taken to the dead-house.

Dr. C. F. Eichler deposed; On Thursday morning at 10 of clock I cannined the dead body of a man lying at the morgue, Circular Quay; the body was that of aman of about 32 years of age; it had the appearances of having been under water for a abort time; the himbs were flexible, the face was epaitered with blook, and there was a small quantity of frothy mucous matter on the lips; the head was covered with durk bair, the face and chin with a dark beard, and the upper lip with a dark monstache; the height of the deceased was 6 foct 6 inches; on the right temple is a cound wound of about a quarter of an inch in diameter, apparently produced by a beall from a revolver or a pistol; on causaining this wound with a probe I could easily trace it for about five inches into the brain substance, in the direction of the left temperal bone, somewhat forward towards the frontal bene; this was the only injury on the bady; the left foot was somewhat out of its instruct position; it was turned outwards, and the maximum produced by a beal foot was somewhat out of its instruct position; it was turned outwards, and the head of the foot; I subsequently made a post-mortem examination of the body; on removing the upper part of the skull a large quantity of dark blood escaped; the lower part of the right hemisphere of the brain was tern and partly filled with blood; on taking the cerebrum out of the skull a large quantity of the wound.

In an swer to the Acting Coroner, Dr. Eichler stated that the skin surrounding the wound was darkoned, and the fell homisphere; the organs of the cheef and abdomen were natural, the cause of death was no dubt the valueration produced by a pistol-ball wound, which was most probably self-inflicted.

In an swer to the Acting Coroner, Dr. Eichler stated that the decise of DEATH FROM AN OVERDOSE OF CHLORODYNE.

Yesterday afternoon the Acting Coroner held an inquest at the Prince Alfred Hospital en the body of a man named Charise Crawford, lately residing at No. 106, Eveleighstreet, Redictin, who died in the institution on the 19th instant. On the moming of Thursday, at about 8 o'clock, his wife endeavoured to arcuse him from sleep; but fluding that she was unable to do so Dr. Lovell was summoned to see what was the matter with the man. On the arrival of the medical gentleman, he ordered Crawford's removal to the Prince Alfred Hospital, where he died, as already stated. The deceased had been unwell for some time prior to his death, and it is said that he occasionally took does of chlorodyne in order to obtain relief from pain. The evidence showed that a bottle containing chlorodyne, and an empty ghass which smelt strongly of the mixture, were found in deceased's room. The jury returned a verdict that deceased from the effects of an overdose of chlorodyne, which was self-administered.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETYS EXPEDITION.

Following his telegram from Nowra, which suggested Following his telegram from Nowre, which suggested a possible explanation of the circumstance that table knives had been seen in the possession of some of the natives on the Fly River, Mr. W. Lovegrove has forwarded to the Hon. G. R. Dibbs extracts from the letter of Mr. Wilhelm Bauerlen, who left Sydney as the botanical collector of the Geographical Society's Expedition. Mr. Lovegrove has omitted all botanical matters, and has included everything, as he puts it, that can touch on the subject of anxiety. There is a striking similarity, he says, in his letter to Mr. Dibbs, about the name "Sumart," and the name given as that of the tribe which is supposed to have massacred the

CASINO, Furday.

Heavy storms occurred here on Wednesday and yesterday, and 114 points of rain fell. The crops in this part of the district are in splendid condition.

The local Land Court opens here on Monday, and 50 cases are down for hearing. It is understood that some important decisions in reference to non-residential selections, conditional leases, and leasehold areas made within 90 days of the passing of the present Act will be given.

FORRES, Farray.

The weather here is very warm and dry, and no indications of a change.

tions of a change.

GRENFELL, FRIDAY.

The local Land Board commenced its sitting to-day, and got through a large amount of luainess.

A destructive fire has taken place at Mr. Hills', of Humburg Creek, by which a quantity of hay, feucing, and machinery, to the value of over £200, was destroyed. The property was uninsured.

The weather here is hot and dry; feed is fairly good, and water is getting scarce. The crops are a failure in this district.

GULGONG, Fairlay.

Henry Bond, aged 16 years, son of Edwin Bond, was killed instantly this evening by the whoel of a water-cart passing over his neck. It is supposed that the horse bolted, as the dray was found capsised about 100 yards from the body.

Some remarkable changes of temperature have taken place here. The thermometer registers over 90 during the day, but at sunset an ensterly breeze sets in and there is sudden fall of 20 degrees. The consequence is that numerous and severe cases of infianmation of the lungs prevail. The dams here are dry, and there are no signs of rain.

GUNDAGAI, Fainay.

General dissatisfaction is freely expressed here at the exceiding trates charged on the Contamundra-Gundagai milway extension for both passenger and goods traffic. A charge of 10s. for about 30 miles for passengers is held to be an extortion; whilst the freight charged for merchandise for the same distance is monstrous, and which the public here will resist streamously. Goods per mil to Bowrang, and thonce by carrier to Gundagai, come at about 18s. per too less, hence many business me are not availing them selves of the railway accommodation. The train for the past three days has been nearly an hour late.

HILLSTON, Fainay.

tremely hot.

The weather here still continues dry, and rain is badly wanted.

MITTAGONG, Parday.

R. Drummond, a boy about four years of age, was drowned in a dam at the back of the town this morning.

NEWCASTLE, Farday.

The Wallsend and Plattsburg Athlotic Club have stranged with Mr. C. B. Ranchaud for 15 years' lease of the ground, and will now commence to fence it in.

The Co-operative Collicry is still idle and it is uncertain when work is likely to be resumed. The men state that in two of the pits the quantity of air is not up to the standard. A special mapection was made on Tuesday last by the men's check inspector, but the result was not satisfactory to the men. The Government Inspector of Colleries, Mr. John Dickson, is inspecting the collicry to-day. The whole of a shift of men are at work for the purpose of improving the air, and it is hoped that the standard quantity will soon be attained, so that the men can resume work. The management are offering every facility for ventilating the mine.

Mr. Josob Jones, late foreman of the Lambton collicry, was presented the other evening, at the Stokers' Hall, by friends at the collicry, with a purse of sovereigns and an illuminated address, prior to leaving to undertake the management of the colliery in the Illawarra district. Alderman Maddock presided. The affair was highly successful. Mr. Jona is greatly respected in Lambton.

A curious recovery of stolen jewelpary occurred last night at Bullock Island. Two femiles thieves, named M'kay and Sinpson, were sentenced a few weeks since for stealing jewellery from various shops in town. Yesteday a little ril named Saunders was playing near the woman Sinpson's late reddence, and found a parcel hidden between the house and the fence. She opened it, and found that it contained three gold brooches, a silver watch—the lot being worth £20. Inspector Thosp now has them. Most likely the proceeds of the robberies will be claimed.

The weather here continues way dry. The crops in this district are much below the average, a the forfeiture, and the question now arrases as to the ownership.

A woman named Poole, residing here, has been suffering from an eruptive disease, supposed to be smallpox. Dr. White, the Government medical officer, and Dr. Pratt visited her, and pronounced it a case of chicken pox; but the fears of the neighbours are not allayed.

At the local police court to-day, George Mills, a publican, for an assault on Mr. George Hooke, nowspaper proprietor of this town, was committed for trial at the Quarter Sessions.

Rain is badly wanted in this district.

A young man named Evan Price was arrested by the police at Adeiong on a charge of stealing a purse containing money and papers to the value of nearly 200 from a commercial traveller named Bell, at Karl Wilder colonial wine shop. Some persons present who thought prisoner was the man who had taken the purse, knocked him down, searched him, and found it on him. He was then given in charge by the owner on a charge of steasing it.

The mail train from Gundagai was two hours behind time on Sunday evening (says the Cootamasdra Liberal). The train is due here at 6.50, and about that time a number of persons were at the station to meet some friends and relatives who were expected by the train. We learn from he engine-driver that when about a mile and a-half from Muttama he noticed something was wrong, and he lost no time in bringing it to a stand-still, when it was discovered that one of the reds of the engine had become uncoupled through a pin dropping out. This delay necessitated the mail-bage having to be removed to the post-office. A special train had to be wired for to Junes, which left here with the mails about 3 a.m.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1885.

Whatever may be the results of the talk about the federation of the Empire, the endeavours that are being made to give definite form and meaning to the idea of the unity of the Empire can hardly fail to bring forth fruit. Even a phrase may be of force in determining the course of events. To call the colonies "Greater Britain" was to lead the average Englishman to look upon them in a new light. To write of "the expansion of England" was to before the eye the fact that the language, the

It is interesting to read of the spirit shown by the English colonies of North America during the struggles with France in the middle of the 18th

"In 1758 Pitt called upon them to furnish 20,000 men, and the provincial Assemblies voted men in abundance. Massachusetts especially distinguished herself. As a bright example of what a colony-State, high-spirited, warlike, and loyal, could effect towards aiding the parent State against a national foe, we quote a report of Governor Pownall to Pitt in that high-spirited, warine, and loyal, could eliest towards adding the parent State against a national foe, we quote a report of Governor Pownall to Pitt in that year. 'Massachusetts,' he says, 'has been the frontier and advanced guard of all the colonies against the enemy in Canada, and has always taken the lead in military affairs. In the three past years she has spent on the expeditions of Johnson, Winslow, and Londonn £242,356, besides about £45,000 a year to support the provincial Government, at the same time maintaining a number of forts and garrisons, keeping up scouting parties, and building, equipping, and manning a ship of twenty guns for the service of the King. In the first two months of the present year, 1758, she made a further military outlay of £172,239. Of all these sums she has received from Parliament [of Great Britain] a reimbursement of only £70,117, and hence she is deep in debt; yet in addition she has this year raised, paid, maintained, and clothed 7000 soldiers placed under the command of General Abercromby, besides above 2500 serving the King by land or sea, amounting in all to serving the King by land or sea, amounting in all about one in four of her able-bodied men."

Besides Massachusetts, Connecticut, though and New Hampshire put one in three of her able-bodied men into the field.

Captain NEITENSTEIN unity of the Empire, prevailing alike amongst the population of the British isles and the members of every group of British subjects scattered over the face of the world, would probably do more to guarantee the integrity of that Empire than any elaborately formulated scheme for reorganising it under the machinery (untried in corresponding conditions) of federal rule.

> The first of the Westminster Review articles appears in the number for July, and deals more particularly with the history and circumstances of British North America, although, as the introductory paper, it opens with a rapid glance at some of the facts and figures relating to colonial England in other parts of the world. The writer warms his immediate readers against concentrating their attention too closely upon Great from looking beyond their immediate sur-siderable success. Newfoundland claims to be "England's oldest and most loyal colony." We may challenge to the fact that the first formal settlement in Newfoundland began in 1688, we must yield precedence to age. We are never tired of surveying the vast territory comprised within the colonies of these southern seas. But is there not a greater cause for pride in the fact that the total area of the colonies exceeds seven million English square milles, of which three and a half millions are in America, over a quarter of a million in Africa, and three millions here? But while there is a greater cause for pride in the fact that the total area of the colonies exceeds seven million English square in Laftice, of which three and a half million are in the receives of our own position and prospects, and warn us to pay the closest attention to the pseuliarities of our climate and soil and general conditions, that we may not waste strongth in pursuits which others are botter fitted to follow than we. This calculation has been tested, In 1881 the average proportion for the whole and found to be accurate. We have been taking pride in the in excess of the supply. The Superintendent patriotism and self-sacrifice displayed by this states that at present there are 450 applicants for boys undisposed of. If the system were not believed to be working well, the public would hardly show such confidence in it as is implied by this fact.

The success of the Vernon Reformatory is due to two things; first, the character of the institution, and secondly, the system of management. It is a place of confinement, and yet has hardly one of the features of such a place. It is a reformatory, but is free from a good deal of the odium that is associated with establishments of that kind. Whatever may have been the case formerly, the boy who is now sent to the Vernon does not experience a sense of degradation. It is far different when he is sent to a gaol or to a reformatory on shore for juvenil criminals. It is difficult for the young mind to associate the idea of a prison or of punishment with a ship, or at all events with the ship of which Captain NEITENSTEIN is in charge. Much of the success of the Vernon is, we repeat, owing to the impression which exists concerning the institution, and this impression is undoubtedly band, the rowing, the cricket matches, and other pleasures and amusements which he has organised in connection with the ship, have had the effect of keeping in the background the real nature of the establishment. little exposed to danger, made equal sacrifices; system carried out on board has also helped to make the institution a success. The Vernon Reformatory has more than fulfilled all our expectations; it is accomplishing as noble work as any institution in he country, and the fact is a cause for congratulation. It is of course not necessary that we should become as enthusiastic on the subject as the energetic Superintendent, and infer, as he seems to do, that the institution ment that characterise England herself, are the part of certain of the colonies of Austral-being such a proved success, reformatories of the globe. And now we find the like ends that of the Canadian provinces, it is Our Victorian neighbours have a proper sense the of the value of the Vernon, but their lowering their opinion of their own farm What they learned was not that a marine reformatory made land ones un-necessary; but that it was an admirable agent for doing a certain class of work. And tobably this is the general feeling. tention of our Government is to establish a reformatory farm in the neighbourhood of Rookwood. If that institution should have appointed to it as superintendent a gentleman as fertile in resource, as enthusiastic in temperament, and as judicious in action as Captain NEITENSTEIN, it cannot be doubted that it will be as successful as the Vernon, and accomplish many things that cannot be attempted on that vessel. But, however successful it may become, while the Vernon institution continues to produce the results it has produced during the last fifteen years, the public will not consent to its abolition.

Mr. EZERIEL BAKER would hardly be described immediate readers against concentrating their attention too closely upon Great Britain, lest by excluding from view should dwarf in their imaginations the true greatness of the Empire. The warning is not unneeded here, for in a colony, as well as in the mother country, the pride of localism is apt to prevail, and to deter men from looking beyond their immediate surgests. Health, order, progress, localism by the process of the length of the establishment, or to make the lengthy had experience of Parliamentary life, and knows what a Ministerial crisis next week would mean. First, there would be the formation of the new Ministry. Then there would be the election of its members. Then the holidays would come upon us, and the year would close. Probably in February the new Ministry would meet the Assembly and vote for supply and a short session, because its measures were unprepared. The short session would end with April, and there would from looking beyond their immediate surroundings over the immense expanse of Empire in which, as British subjects, they have characterised the inmates. Sickness was wholly confined to the new-comers. It could not well have been otherwise. The present populations of Sydney and Melbourne, and speculate upon their probable relative magnitude twenty years hence. What a different aspect the question wears when it is presented, as in this review, in a table showing that (London being excluded) Melbourne stands sixth and Sydney eighth country under actual circumstances by deli-berately throwing away, for such a reason as this, the opportunity of proceeding at once with legislation which the country requires. There are some members, probably, who are not indepen-dent, who will say that Mr. Barke's perceptions are dull; but it is not unlikely that they may have to say the same thing as to others besides Mr. Barker for taking a similar sober view of the situation.

case where Ministries have been formed and the history of the process has been narrated under widely different circumstances. If a crisis occurs in the middle of a session, and an explanation is made by the new leader on meeting the House, that is not a precedent for delaying the reply to the Governon's opening speech, so that such matters may be first disposed of. We know that in the early days of responsible government these Ministorial explanations were full and detailed, but it is also the fact that for years past the matter has been treated more lightly. The House has a right to look for such explanations, especially when anything of special interest has occurred, but it is not so certain that the House has always received them. The principle applies not only to the case of new Ministries, but also to changes in the composition of a Ministry; and (subject to correction) we think it will be found in a remarkable case of that sort, too recent to be generally forgotten, that no such explanation was given, in season or out of season. In 1881, Sir Henry Parkes and Sir John Robertson were members of the same Ministry. In November of that year Sir John Robertson were members of the same Ministry. In November of that the time in correspondence laid before Parliament. The seasion Robertson withdrew from that Ministry, for reasons that were fully disclosed at the time in correspondence laid before Parliament. The session terminated on the 20th December. On the following day Sir John Robertson was appointed to an office in the same Ministry. As Parliament was not stiting, in o explanation could be offered then, but when Parliament did meet, where was the explanation? We have searched for it in vain. Certainly the interval was long, for Parliament did not meet again until August, 1882. But the new Minister had been acting Colonial Secretary the while, and the circumstances of the transaction were very remarkable. In the present case, the charge against the Government of insulting the House is one that could have been urged under cover of Sir John Robertson's general declaration of no-confidence. Why did Sir Henry not reserve it for his speech on that motion? Has the debate upon that motion ranged at too lows level to admit of the introduction of high constitutional questions?

It was just five minutes to 5 o'clock when the order of the day for the resumption of the debate on the address in reply to the Governor's speech was read in the Logislative Assembly yesterday, and Mr. Lyall Soott member for the Wollombi, rose to continue the debate.

Mr. Soott did not attempt to beat about 'the bush, but stated at once that he should vote against the amendment, and in favour of the Government. The honmember commenced by giving a well-merited rebuke to those who had made themselves so painfully conspicuous during the debate by interrupting the speakers, and he pointed out that some of the oldest members of the House were the most hardened offenders. This statement of the hon. member was fully confirmed by the leader of the Cepposition, Sir John Robertson, who interrupted in the most impartial manner the speakers from his own side of the House, as well as those who spoke from the Government side. Mr. Soots expressed the hope that the new members would set a better example in this respect than the old members did. He admitted that he did not in all respects approve of the composition of the present Government, but he asked where in that House they could find a better. He did not consider that the present Government possessed the confidence of the people, and he should vote for the amondment. Mr. Neild raised some laughter by making puns upon the names of some of the Ministry; but caused much merriment by reading a letter from Mr Buchanan to Sir Henry Parkes, strongly condemning the present Government. Mr. Neild spoke for about ur and a half, and at 20 minutes past 10 o'clock te was adjourned on the motion of Mr. Ives.

Sir Hwert Parkes, after adjournment of the debate on the address in reply to the Governor's speech, rose in his place, speaking on the motion for the adjournment of the House, and complained that the House had had no information whatever as to the new Government and its formation. According to constitutional practice, this was absolutely necessary, and it had always been done before, but up to the present hour the House had no information whatever that there was any Government at all in existence. Mr. Dibbs, in seply, said Sir Henry Parkes might have reserved his remarks until he spoke on the question of the address in reply. The hon member was throwing dust in the eyes of the House and of the new members, for he very well knew that the first duty of the Parliament was to reply to the Governor's speech. When that was done the explanation that the hon member desired would be made. The House adjourned shortly before half-past 10 o'clock until 4 o'clock on Tuesday.

repaired to Aarone Exchange Hotel, to discuss the question as to a suitable 'uniform for the corps. The commanding officer, Major Macdonald, occupied the chair, and in introducing the subject commented upon the desirability of the lift being sdopted as a uniform, and suggested that the dress should as nearly as possible resemble that of the famous Black Watch, the 42nd Highlanders. The matter was discussed at considerable length, and on the vote being taken resulted in a majority of six in favour of the kilt being accepted as the most suitable uniform

DITT, SON, and BADGERY have received instructions from the Executors in the Extate of the late H. Newcomen to sell by suction, at the Exchange, Sydney, on TUE-DAT, 24th November next, at 13 o'clock,

It is above magnificent property of the Kurrajong, with an easterly aspect, this property enjoys a position unequalled in this substitutions district. It has a very large frontage to the Hawkeebury River in one of its most romantic spots, and the Hawkeebury River in one of its most romantic spots, and the Hawkeebury River in one of its most romantic spots, and the Hawkeebury River in one of its most romantic spots, and the Hawkeebury River in one of its most romantic spots, and the Hawkeebury River in the force are unsurpassed for richness and fertility. The hill on which the house is situated slopes almost to the water's edge, and the whole of the lovely winding course of the river, with the far-famed Hawkeebury Flats, dotted here and there with picturesque homesteads and the towns of lichmond and Windsor beyond, make up a paporama of surpassing loveliness at one's feet. The batk lands, which comprise hill and data, are admirably stapped for orange-groves—in fact, a considerable portion of the state, he our opinion, the best am essential course of the state, he can be considered to the hirigation can be carried on to any eigent.

There is no doubt that the Kurrajong is destined to become our great summer resort, for it is not nearly so liable to fogs as the filue Mountains, and if the new line of railway avoiding the lignage is made as now contempiated, past Richmond, it will increase the value of the land to an enormous extent. The peculiar advantages enjoyed by this estate, whether as an investment, a gentleman's home, or for purposes of subdivision by land syndicates, required from the second. The railway line is surveyed through the property, and when nee the quick and certain transit by steam engine is to the spot, very large development in value must take place—for the dis-rict is clevated, healthy and picturesque.
